Enhance your expertise in international law and commerce

In a globalised and internationalised world, organisations and individuals can no longer afford to view commerce from the confines of one jurisdiction and market. From 2015, UWA will offer a Graduate Diploma and Master in International Commercial Law, courses designed to equip you for success in today’s world.

The courses are suitable for those who wish to access opportunities where business and law meet and are applicable both to the current law practitioner and those in other fields.

Learning from internationally respected experts with an extensive and wide range of experience, you will develop a sound understanding of the legal aspects of finance, sales, shipping and other commercial transactions.

The units which comprise the Graduate Diploma are the core units for the Masters and provide a solid foundation in the key areas of law relating to trade, sales, shipping and finance.

Those completing the Masters will then have the opportunity to specialise in areas which relate to their specific interest including World Trade Organisation law, commercial arbitration and dispute resolution.

Transform your career

- Obtain a practical understanding of international commercial law, including sales, shipping and finance
- In undertaking a Masters you can choose electives which enable you to focus on an area of international commercial law which matches your interests
- Attain greater access to career opportunities in a tightly contested employment market
- Engaging with practitioners and experts throughout your study will enhance your links with academia, government and business
- Benefit from UWA’s networks with the legal profession and industry
